Ease the worries that come with quitting

There are many methods out there to help you stop smoking. But no matter which one you choose, the road to quitting can get a little bumpy. At least at first.

For many quitters, a common bump in the road is anxiety. Without cigarettes, you feel tense and worried. Neck and shoulder muscles get tight. Stress builds.

These feelings often start in the first 24 hours of quitting. Luckily, they also taper off with time. Most quitters feel much better after a week or so.

In the meantime, there are ways to keep these feelings under control.

For instance:

- Stay active. Take a walk or do some other physical activity each day.

- Seek calm. A massage or a hot bath can work wonders. But so can a few deep breaths. Just inhale slowly through your nose and exhale through your mouth. Repeat 10 times.
- Remember that it passes. Anxiety fades a little bit every day that you don't smoke.

Seek help from ASHLine

Many people have quit smoking and stopped tobacco use through programs offered by the Arizona

Smokers Helpline (ASHLine). The ASHLine has several valuable and free resources.

If you want more information to help you quit tobacco, please call the ASHLine at 1-800-55-66-222, visit www.ashline.org or talk to your primary care provider. You do not need a referral from your doctor to call ASHLine. ASHLine also offers information to help protect you and your loved ones from secondhand smoke.

Diabetes

Keep an eye on your feet

If you have diabetes, you know you have to check your blood sugar. But did you know you also need to check your feet every day? That's because you can develop sores and wounds, called foot ulcers.

If you have diabetes, taking a good look at your feet may be the only way to know you have an ulcer. That's because you may have lost feeling in your feet. Many people with diabetes do. So a developing wound won't always cause pain. But it may become red and swell. Or it could drain pus onto your sock or shoe.

A foot ulcer may have trouble healing properly. An unhealed wound can result in infection. And that may lead to an amputation.

If you discover a wound, see a doctor right away. Fast treatment can speed healing.

Have diabetes? Set your sights on healthy vision

Vision loss: Anyone with diabetes is at risk for it. But there are steps you can take to help save your sight.

First, get regular diabetic retinopathy eye exams at least once a year. Don't wait until you notice vision loss. That's because diabetes can cause harm without any early warning signs.

During your exam, your eye doctor will look for:

- Leaking blood vessels. Blood in the eye can cloud your vision.
- Swelling. It may be a sign of fluid leaking into the eye. That can cause blurring.
- Changes in blood vessels or nerve tissue.
- Any other eye issues.

If there's a problem, your doctor can suggest solutions.

To protect your sight, you also need to manage your diabetes. Follow your treatment plan to keep blood sugar, blood pressure and cholesterol under control.

Do you have vision loss caused by diabetes? Low-vision services and devices may help. Ask your eye doctor for details.

Don't let the flu get to you

Each year has a flu season. And each flu season, the virus may change.

That's why almost everyone should get a new flu shot every year. The shot is the best way to protect yourself.

A flu shot is really important if you're 65 or older. Older bodies don't fight off germs as well as young ones. An illness like the flu can make older people very sick. And the flu is more likely to turn into pneumonia in older people.

It's not too late. It's best to get a flu shot in early fall. But later is OK too.

HEALTH TIP: Call your doctor if your fever won't go down. Also call if you have:

- Trouble breathing
- Chest pain
- A cough that makes it hard to sleep

Colds vs. flu: Which is it?

You feel lousy. But you're not sure what to do. Why? Because you aren't sure if your symptoms point to a cold or the flu.

Sometimes it's hard to tell which bug you have. After all, they both affect the respiratory system and are caused by viruses. Both also usually last a few days and then go away on their own.

So which is it? Check this chart for symptoms of each bug:

Symptom	Colds	Flu
Fever	Rare	Often 100–102 degrees
Chills, sweats	Rare	Often
Fatigue	Sometimes	Usual
Muscle aches	Sometimes, usually mild	Often severe
Runny nose	Common	Sometimes
Stuffy nose	Common	Sometimes
Sneezing	Common	Sometimes
Watery eyes	Common	Sometimes
Sore throat	Common	Sometimes
Coughing	Hacking cough	Can become severe
Headache	Rare	Common

Though each bug usually has to run its course, it's a good idea to call your doctor. He or she can help you get the right treatment started early.
